

REL 341: Women, Abolition, and Religion in 19th-Century America

The role that religion may have played in women's understandings of themselves as abolitionists and social reformers. A selected group of women will be studied, with considerable attention given to Frances Harper.