This course focuses on power as female and female power, on goddesses and on women, in Hindu cosmology, mythology, and society. We look at gender hierarchies in various rural and urban, past and present, domestic and political, textual and cultural contexts. Most especially, we try to observe and understand complex, multifaceted interrelationships among mythic, economic, and social constructions of female beings in India; a "critical reflections" course.

Readings

The following books are required readings and should be available for purchase at the University Bookstore. They have also been placed on 2-hour reserve in Bird library:

The following required readings -- here listed alphabetically by author / translator-- will be available to download as PDFs from our merged Blackboard course web site, in folders under "content."

Richman, Paula, ed. 2008 Selections from Ramayana Stories in Modern South India: "Foundations" (1-13); "Talking Back" (58-63); "Forest of Possibilities" (91-98)

Selected sources on the "delhi Braveheart" rape case and related matters

Requirements

Read, reflect, attend, pay attention, stay awake, talk, listen, think, learn, understand, question, compose

Your grade will be based on several different tasks designed to allow your instructor and T.A.s to assess how well you are meeting these requirements. The tasks break down as follows:
5 out of 6 response papers @ 5 points each 25% participation 30% independent project 25%
take-home 2/3-term essay (5-6 pages) 20%

*Extra credit potential 5 % max
See p. 6 for additional details on requirements

more about requirements

Response papers are 2-3 pages long. In them you reflect on specific syllabus content most often covering a two-week period. Response papers serve two main purposes: a) they reveal whether or not you are keeping up with the readings, and eliminate the need for exams; b) they help you to prepare for in-class discussions.

Participation means:

1) All students are expected to come to every class prepared to talk about that day’s reading assignment.

2) Beginning the third week of class, 3-4 students will take pre-arranged, rotating turns at being “point-persons” (discussion leaders). A point-person gives a brief (under 3 minutes) opening presentation of the assigned readings. This is not a summary, but more of an oral response. Its main purpose is to get a general discussion going among all class members. Mostly, you should prepare a list of questions addressed to fellow students (not your professor) and designed to get them talking. Any and all creative strategies are encouraged! Please consult one another and cooperate to prepare; we will facilitate this with self-enrollment groups on blackboard. Everyone must take at least two turns in the course of the semester!

Participation will push you to articulate your thoughts about what may be for some completely unfamiliar materials, and for others new ways of thinking about familiar materials. REL/SAS/WGS 384 is a designated "critical reflections" course, and it is appropriate to use syllabus readings to reflect back onto broader social issues, both in South Asia and at home. Remember that our primary aim is always to understand, not to judge.

Your participation is assessed largely on presence and preparation; discussion leadership is a major component. Everyone starts with a B (22 points). You will maintain it through fulfilling the conditions detailed above. Consistently well-prepared discussion and near-perfect attendance can of course raise this grade; evident negligence and / or no-shows on your discussion leader turn day can lower it.

attendance counts, but I don’t want unwilling prisoners. Therefore, missing three or fewer classes will not affect your grade. However, each cut over three will take 3 points off your participation score. We will do our best to keep an accurate written record of student attendance, but it is your responsibility to sign the sheet!

Independent projects are your single opportunity to go beyond the syllabus and explore a particular topic in greater depth. Details TBA in hand-out distributed on 2/12.

2/3 term essay question (take-home, open book, approximately 5-6 pages) will challenge you to display your comprehensive understandings of the syllabus.

Please note: Late work is bad for you and bad for us. On the other hand, we acknowledge the complexities and balancing acts of college life. Any written work that is one class late will lose a full letter grade (one point off on the 5-point response papers; 3 points off on the essay). Absolutely no response papers will be accepted beyond one class late.

Opportunities arise during the semester to write responses to outside events -- lectures, films, performances -- that enhance your knowledge and understanding of gender in Indian culture. I list a few possibilities below; I may announce others as I learn of them. I offer maximum 2 extra credit points for a one-page response paper describing any event and explaining how it relates to our syllabus. Extra Credit is capped at 5 points, but learning potential is limitless.

Learning Outcomes

In keeping with University-wide concerns to assess learning outcomes in undergraduate courses, the religion department advises all students of the following goals. You will learn:

- to understand better what we mean by "religion" and to think more critically about the subject;
- to become more aware of a diversity of perspectives within the study of religion;
- to know and understand better diverse manifestations of religion within human cultures and societies, and be able to describe and interpret them.

Your grades in this course, based on written and classroom performance, will reflect your achievement of these goals, at the broadest level.
IMPORTANT NOTICES REGARDING FAITH TRADITION OBSERVANCES, DISABILITY, INTEGRITY AND COURTESY:
PLEASE READ CAREFULLY

faith tradition observances  SU’s religious observances policy recognizes the diversity of faiths represented among the campus community and protects the rights of students, faculty, and staff to observe religious holy days according to their tradition. Under the policy, students are provided an opportunity to make up any examination, study, or work requirements that may be missed due to a religious observance provided they notify their instructors before the end of the second week of classes. An online notification process is available through MySlice/Student Services/Enrollment/My Religious Observances from the first day of class until the end of the second week of class. If you need to miss any class session during the spring semester due to a faith tradition observance, please make sure to take care of filing your notification(s) immediately.

disability  Students who are in need of disability-related academic accommodations must register with the Office of Disability Services (ODS), 804 University Avenue, Room 309, 315-443-4498. Students with authorized disability-related accommodations should provide a current Accommodation Authorization Letter from ODS to the instructor and review those accommodations with the instructor. Accommodations, such as exam administration, are not provided retroactively; therefore, planning for accommodations as early as possible is necessary. For further information, see http://disabilityservices.syr.edu academic integrity  The Syracuse University Academic Integrity Policy holds students accountable for the integrity of the work they submit. Students should be familiar with the Policy and know that it is their responsibility to learn about instructor and general academic expectations with regard to proper citation of sources in written work. The policy also governs the integrity of work submitted in exams and assignments as well as the veracity of signatures on attendance sheets and other verifications of participation in class activities. Serious sanctions can result from academic dishonesty of any sort. Students in REL/SAS/WGS 384 found violating academic integrity in any aspect of their class work will receive the grade F for that assignment. Students have a right to appeal. Please see http://academicintegrity.syr.edu/academic courtesy  All students are expected to follow simple rules of academic courtesy to fellow students and instructors. Please come to class on time to avoid disrupting the class; for the same reason, please do not leave and return while class is in session. Once class begins, you must refrain from personal conversations. You must put away all non-course reading materials (e.g. newspapers). Normal practice is to turn off and put away all electronic devices unless they are specifically required to access course materials; if that is the case, inform instructor. Please avoid premature preparations to leave class; your instructor will let you know when class is over. Eating is not allowed during class. You may be asked to leave the class for the day if you do not follow these rules.
