

REL 206: Greco-Roman Religions

Spring 2019 | MW 12:45-2:05pm | Instructor: Virginia Burrus

This course explores the variety of religious practices and traditions in the richly pluralistic context of the Roman Mediterranean, from roughly the first through the fifth centuries of the common era—the period in which Christianity emerged on the scene. We will consider a range of religious expressions, including myths and stories, philosophy, ritual practice, and art.

This course satisfies major and minor requirements in Religion and Classical Civilization.
